

GENERATORS IN THE SUN...Submitted by John Weaver

John: I tried asking one of those difficult questions and I received this:

Question: Where are the generators of God? Do they have a certain location?

There are many generators for many worlds. Do you want to know where Earth's generator is? It occupies the same location as the sun; although, as you know, it is not in your dimension. Your sun receives its energy from your generator. It converts part of the plasma stream into the energies you perceive. It does not receive its energy from atomic fusion as scientists have theorized. They have no idea of what really takes place.

Just because it is located in the same place as your sun does not mean that its only function is to power the sun; that is only one of the things it powers up. As you know, it is the source of life for all living things. It is also the source of power and life for all the other celestial bodies that are close to your sun. In your physical world the sun gives energy to planet Earth, but it is not only transmitting the light you can see. The generator produces other forms of energy by way of the blue plasma stream. You can think of the plasma stream as spiritual energy whereas the sun produces physical energy.

Question: Does the City of Light also use the generator in the sun as it is also close to it?

No, it has no need of it as it has the Son to power it, who gets it from His Father.

Question: What about the little sun inside the Earth, where does it get its power?

It gets its power from the Earth's generator, of course. It's not limited by little things like the Earth's crust all around it. It converts the plasma stream to light and heat just like the sun does. It doesn't matter that the physical location isn't so close. Remember that time and space are not relevant in the spiritual dimensions. God has reasons for where He puts things but that doesn't mean that they have to always be there as is evident in that the City of Light wasn't always in the moon and it won't always be there. I suppose if God wanted to put Earth's generator inside the little sun inside the Earth He could do that too.