Jesus speaking: My love, My brave fighter, and bride, I will never forsake you and I never have. I would never keep you this long just to drop you and forsake you. No, not I as your faithful Husband and Protector. I have a plan for you; and each of you are a special part of My plan. But in order for you to fulfill that plan fully you must go through certain tests that will strengthen you and prepare you for your future roles. I need your trust in Me and your faith in My Word to be indestructible and immovable. But in order for your faith to reach this level you must go through these training processes. Yes, even in the endtime you will be training for what is to come. Never look at this endtime as the be all and end all. When your earth life finishes it is only the beginning, and when I come back things will just start happening in earnest. Don't think that all this training that you are going through is only for the endtime, and once that is finished it will all go to waste. No way, I see far beyond this short, although very important earth life and I am putting you each through the training that will make you the strongest and most fit for My use in the days to come. To pass these tests and for your faith to come out of training finer then gold and stronger than ever before you must hold onto Me, and never lose sight of My good promises. To win, you must stand no matter what comes your way and to continue no matter what happens. Will you keep on believing even when My promises seem to fall short, and when it seems that the keys are working for you? You must, My love, for in this time of training and testing this is the only way you will make it. You have gone through many tests and come out stronger and better, will this be the same? Will your tenaciously hold onto My promises no matter what? Will you be faithful to Me even unto death despite the seeming lacks and contradictions? This is the only way to win. Any other possible course of action will be defeat and you might as well throw your whole life's work away with it too. Don't give up, don't throw in the towel at the last moment before victory. I am still here, and as you hold tightly onto My hand I will be able to lift you up and above the difficulties and trials that you face. I will not put you through anything that is too much for you. I will test you to your limits, so that you will learn to find your true strength in Me, and just when you are at the end of your rope I will catch you and reward you for your faithfulness, endurance and tenacity. The heroes will get the hero's reward and nothing less, and I promise that as you continue to stand strong and be My Endtime Hero, I will reward you and your name will be painted in the Hall of Fame beside all those that have gone through the tests, and passed on to final victory. I love you, and even if you end up like the folks in Hebrews 11, I am ever with you, and if you continue to believe then you will win and you will triumph in the end.
